Vicarious trauma is the emotional residue that develops from working with people as they share their trauma stories and you become witnesses to their pain. Vicarious trauma is increasingly recognized as an occupational hazard in human services, particularly when working with children and families. Addressing vicarious trauma is essential if we are going to be successful in sustaining ourselves in the field and ensuring that we are able to continue to provide high quality, trauma-informed care. Dr. Shelly Bartow will discuss best practices and ways to integrate vicarious trauma awareness into your organization.
